DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

2. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

The term "defines the random number function" (claim 4) is not defined in the specification. The specification also does not teach how two circuits could both generate the same "random" number and the claims do not specify how the first circuit attains the random number.

3. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

4. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

With regard to claims 1 and 6, two separate circuits are seemingly generating the same number. It is unclear how they could be truly random. In light of applicant's arguments, the examiner is going to treat the claims as if they claimed the second integrated circuit sending the random number to the first. This is not claimed. It is also not claimed that one of the integrated circuits is "of the device" as is stated in the arguments.

Claim 3 recites the limitation "the integrated circuit" in line 14. It is unclear which integrated circuit this is referring to of the two previously defined integrated circuits.

Claim 4 recites "defines the random number function". It is unclear what defining is being done here.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

6. Claims 1, 2, 5, and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Redl et al., in An Introduction to GSM.

With regard to claims 1, 5, and 6, Redl discloses an apparatus (authentication center) for validating the presence of an authorized consumable (SIM card) of a device (cell phone) including a first IC (of the SIM card) which stores a secret key (page 45, Ki), and a second IC (of the AC) generates a random number (RAND), and apply a function (A3) to the key and number (calculated value from the AC), the second IC sends the random number to the first IC, where it is used to apply a function to its stored key and number (SRES) and a control system (the network) which requests the results from both ICs, and compares the two functions (page 45).

With regard to claim 2, Redl discloses the A3 algorithm as a one-way function (page 45 paragraph beginning "The A3").

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

7. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

8. Claims 3 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Redl.

With regard to claims 3 and 4, Redl discloses the validating method of claim 1, as outlined above, but does not teach how the random number is generated. The examiner takes official notice that a LFSR is a known way to generate random numbers. Support for this can be found in the Koopman (column 5 lines 2-12) rejection of the last office action. It would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to use a LFSR to generate the random number of Redl to generate the number quickly.

Conclusion

9. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within

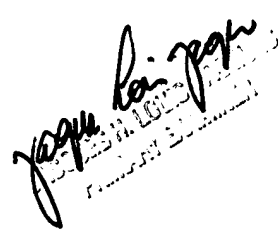

TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
